

High-resolution still images are used often in architectural work. Many clients require a 2'x3' or larger framed image of their building to display in a sales office or corporate boardroom.